Setting: Barbara and Bob are thinking about starting up a walking group at lunchtime. The purpose of this group is to walk together, stay healthy and do a little team bonding. Barbara is excited about the idea but does not want any older or who she feels overweight co workers come because they might slow down others.

1. Hi Bob. Have you heard about the new walking group I am putting together for our team
3. I was thinking, it would be a great idea to do some team building while staying healthy by going for walks during lunch. What do you think?
5. Well, we didn't want to tell everyone. You know Sandra is almost 60 and wears a knee brace, and Robert is a little on the large size. They would just slow us down.
7. It is, but healthy will it be if we have to keep stopping to give them breaks, and have to worry if they will have a heart attack while walking?

2. Hey Barbara, no I had not heard about it
4. I think that is a great idea, we can all benefit from getting out and walking more. I will let the rest of the team know about this. When are we starting?
6. So wait, you don't want to include them because you feel they would slow us down? I thought you said this was going to be a team building as well as a healthy event.
8. I see your point. Let's just try to go early before Sandra gets here. I am sure she would probably prefer to walk alone at her own comfortable pace.
